“Our company is honoured and humbled to have a featured editorial—Pride of Place in Timeless Luxury—Ninety Years of the (Rolls-Royce) Phantom. The book and the marquee represent symbols of excellence in the luxury market place,” states D'Alessio Inspired Architectural Designs' President Andrea D'Alessio, Jr.

More than 200 Rolls-Royce Owners' Club (RROC) members and VIP guests joined the London based St James's House (<http://www.stjames.org>) publisher of the book, for a very British afternoon tea as well as champagne reception, for the book's launch at the 64th Annual Meet. Owners and enthusiasts from across the country gather each year to have the chance to view the finest vintage Rolls-Royce and Bentley motorcars in existence today.

The RROC Annual Meet was in Florida this year and celebrated the 90th anniversary of the Rolls-Royce New Phantom, with the launch of Timeless Luxury—Ninety Years of the Phantom.

The book explores the rich history of the marque as well as extending into areas of art, culture, luxury and travel—a world of people, places, and things. The D'Alessio's editorial appears in Chapter 3—Grand Designs titled Pride of Place, it discusses the art of legacy home-building design and how intrinsic details give a home the feeling of luxury and sense of warmth.

The Art of The Phantom chapter highlights beautiful illustrations from a 1925 catalogue of New Phantom models, entitled Advance Sketches of New Coachwork.

Rolls-Royce owners, as well as all car enthusiasts alike will find this book of great interest; <http://bit.ly/1ImDXII>, good reading.
